of course, each time I included the needed variables. But this was not working for me; 'P' is always NULL, leaving me with a value of 0 which in turn puts the other variables to NULL. A: Fix your WHERE clause. It should not be AND ANY(P2). WHERE M_P2 IS NOT NULL This means that the value of P2 is nullable. Any will always return TRUE (as opposed to NOT ANY which will return FALSE). Another way to write the WHERE clause is: WHERE M_P2 IS NULL OR M_P2 =? which is the first time the API has been tested on the pipeline in the field, and we have seen no performance issues at all. Performance aside, this configuration also fully supports the MapReduce model of processing in Hadoop, which we believe may be the future of data flow programming. The final feature is a fully scalable data-flow API that makes running data flows easy to use, and scales easily from cell-sized to cluster-sized data flows. To make sure that you can use this new API, we are announcing that we are opening our new Data Management API to developers. The new API is written in Java and can be used to process any Hadoop-compatible file or sequence of files by any of the vendors. You can find out more information about the API on its website, at The new API is now in beta, and we look forward to hearing your feedback. Regards, Gary Gary Leff President, Chief Executive Officer CRA P.S. I forgot to mention that CRA will be giving two webcasts on May 1st - one at 2:30 Pacific Time and another at 4:30 Pacific Time. Both will be on the new API. Pavel Shumeyko CRA/Google Lead Programmer, Data Management API - ApacheLicense.txt On the second anniversary of his much-publicized bout with Michael Phelps, the man is still "washing dishes"... Well, actually, he's taking them from the sink to the dishwasher. But, hey, you get the idea. Rather than declare his moment in the sun "over," the man has decided
